Brian Williamson sentenced to 120 years for May 2013
double homicide

Williamson found guilty by jury of two counts of Murder

(Indianapolis, Ind.) Marion County Prosecutor Terry Curry announced today that Brian Williamson has been sentenced to 120 years executed in the Indiana Department of Correction. Williamson was convicted on January 16 of two counts of Murder for the May 2013 shooting deaths of Darrius Lloyd and Walter Harris, Jr.

It was alleged in the probable cause affidavit that Williamson, 22, shot Lloyd, 20, and Harris, 21, who were college students at the time, during a dispute over the purchase of marijuana. The victims were found in a car near Chase Bank at 42nd and Franklin Road. Williamson's fingerprint was discovered in the blood on the exterior driver's side door. Additionally, the car keys and Lloyd's wallet were found in a closet in Williamson's half-brother's apartment, where Williamson was known to stay at the time of the murder.

Surveillance video from the Chase ATM showed the victim's car pull up short of the ATM just before midnight on May 1, 2013, then careen over a median before coming to rest where the victims were discovered inside the car the next evening. Prosecutors argued that Williamson had to steer the car from the back seat after shooting both driver and passenger. Williamson then exited the car and went through the victims' property before fleeing the scene.

A charge of a crime is merely an accusation, and the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.
